Italian Cabinet Says Reform Will Cut Its Pay, Not Raise It

ROME, Nov. 17 (UPI) .- The government said today that the go down from the present salaries of Premier Giulio Andreotti and his cabinet ministers will go down, not up, under a recent civil service pay reform. Mr. Andreotti's office said that press reports that the reform would more than double the salaries of cabinet members were based on a misinterpretation of Milan's Corriere Della Sera and other newspapers said that pay raises the government decreed for high-ranking civil servants Tuesday would come to apply to government members as well be-cause of an old law linking their salaries to those of top-echelon bureaucrats. They said that this would double the income of the premier and ministers.

Only One Salary

The government said that the reform does indeed also apply to the ministers, but that it includes a stipulation that a person cannot draw more than one salary from the state. This means that cabinet members will lose the parliamentary indemnity of 955,544 lire ($1,624), which they now draw in addition to their salaries. The pay raise will not entirely offset that loss, the government

Hundreds of such plants have closed since the 1969 "hot autumn" of labor unrest, and many have closed this year, including small factories of such giants as Pirelli Montecatini Edison and Zanussi, a once booming but now shaky Italian home appliance manufacturer.

This week, 1.5 million metalworkers struck, along with nearly 1 million construction workers, all seeking higher pay. Lowerpaid bureaucrats struck because they were left out of the decree doubling salaries of their superiors. And Pirelli, Montedison and Zanussi employees struck in protest against the plant closings. At week's end the government announced the biggest monthly jump on record for the cost of living index since World War II. It went up 1.3 percent last month, a rate of more than 15 percent

Brand Peron Ends His Exile; Troops Bar Welcome

By Joseph Novitski

BUENOS AIRES Nov. 17 (NYT).—Juan Domingo Peron returned to Argentina today after years of exile with the announced aim of helping pacity a country that has been divided since his authoritarian, populist rule ended 17 years ago.

The former army officer who ruled Argentina as a dictatorial elected president for nine turbulent years ending in 1955 arrived in a chartered Italian jetliner at 11:08 a.m. after an overnight flight from Rome. He immediatewent into seclusion in the hotel at Buenos Aires International Airport, canceling a scheduled message to the country and a news conference in protest over security measures applied for his return.

Mr. Peron, his third wife, Isabel Martinez, and seven of his im-mediate staff were whisked off the plane by government security agents who moved them to the hotel through a driving rain in a tight formation of five cars.

Mr. Peron, tall and looking fit, stepped out of the car for 50 seconds to stand under an um-brella, waving to two thin lines of his followers, outnumbered by newsmen at the airport. Meets Supporters

After noon, he met with national leaders of his movement and leaders of allied political parties. His immediate plans were unknown, and his future movements remained unclear in the tense atmosphere of the stiff. armed government welcome. The Peronist movement expected him to stay in Buenos Aires at least through Monday.

The Argentine military government, led by enemies of Mr. Peron, who invited him back to reach a political agreement, sur-rounded Ezelza Airport as though they expected an airborne invasion and not a 77-year-old politician, his wife and 153 of his admirers. Tear gas, armored cars, troops and tanks were used to turn back several thousand Mr. Peron's followers, who walked all morning through a cold, driving rain trying to reach the siroort.

No serious casualties were reported immediately. But news of the attempted demonstrations of support was kept off radio and television broadcasts, apparently by government order.

Navy Man Killed Officials said a navy petty officer died in an abortive predawn revolt led by petty officers apparently supporting Mr. Peron at a navy technical school in suburban Buenos Aires. Only 300 wet Peronists, each individually authorized by the junta of commanders in chief of the three armed forces, stood behind police barriers when the white-and-green Alitalia jet touched down in a cloud of spray, A platoon of infantrymen in combat gear surrounded the plane in loose formation, their weapons at the ready and turned towards the sucraft.

"Security measures are for Mr Peron's safety," a government spokesman said yesterday. The spokesman, Edgar Sajon, added that Mr. Peron was authorized to land at Ezeiza and stay at the airport hotel. The implication, which he did not deny when questioned, was that any further moves by the controversial leader could only be taken after consultation with the military govern-fate of what Mr. Peron has called in recent days his "peace mission" appeared unclear. Heath Says 2 Sides in Ulster Have Confidence in Britain

BELFAST, Nov. 17 (AP) .-Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath said today that he had found a "great improvement in Northern Ireland" and the time had come to press on toward a political settlement.

Mr. Heath's optimistic statement came on another day of violence. A Catholic legislator's wife was beaten and branded by terrorists, a policeman was killed and two bomb blasts rocked downtown Belfast. The prime minister said at a

In his pitch for the money, Mr. Treverrow said, Mr. Odell stressed that funds contributed prior to April 7 would not have to be reported under a new campaign disclosure law. Mr. Trevarrow said he recalls the Odell solicitations took place in late March.

After the second solicitation, Mr. Trevarrow said, he again telephoned vice-president Hedge at the automakers' Detroit headquarters. Mr. Hedge said he told Mr. Tre-

Mr. Hedge said he in turn told board chairman Roy D. Chapin

The Crucial German Election: Ostpolitik or Economics?

By John M. Goshko

of the ritual that ends an American election, the West Germans will gather around their TV sets and wait for the computers and commentators of the two national networks to tell them who won.

The question is whether the voters on Sunday will give a new mandate to Chancellor Willy Branct and his left-of-center coalition of Social Democrats and liberal Free Democrats or will swing toward conservatism and give the nod to Rainer Barzel, standard-bearer of the Christian Democrats, who led the country through 20 years of postwar reconstruction.

The battle lines dividing the two sides have been drawn clearly enough. Mr. Brandt has chosen the incumbent's natural role of statesman and is running all out on the record of his Ostpolitik, or Eastern policy—the drive to improve West Germany's relations with the Communist bloc, which has earned him a Nobel Peace Prize.

As the challenger, Mr. Barzel been forced to emphasize more homely issues, chief among them West Germany's mounting inflation. In an appeal to voters' fears about their pocketbooks, ne has hammered at the theme that Mr. Brandt's re-election would mean ruinous price rises and costly social tinkering on a scale that would bankrupt the country. Dead Heat

Yet, while the options are clear. there is still great uncertainty about which one the voters are going to pick up. As the campaign ended, the two sides appeared locked in a dead heat.

Public-opinion polls and party pros agreed that the basic constituencies of the two major parties remain substantially unchanged from past elections and that the outcome will be determined by approximately five million "floating," or independent, voters. But they confessed bafflement at which issues and personalities are going to count most with uncommitted voters.

Yet this is what the election is all about. Even the names of the winners are less important than what the vote says about the things the electorate has uppermost on its mind. By late Sunday night the political analysts will be sifting through the results, trying to sketch a picture of the mood, the aspirations and the future direction of the Ger-

What the experts conclude will be of keen interest not only to West Germany's 61 million citizens but also to untold other prople in both halves of Europe and in the United States. Of all the countries in Western Europe. it is West Germany whose elections seem to draw the largest share of outside attention.

BONN, Nov. 17 (WP).—Early world has ever seen, Inevitably. Sunday evening, in a carbon copy there is a compulsion to scrutinize any election here for signs of whether the virus of fascism still lurks within the German body politic.

Even for those who consider the danger of a Nazi revival a dead issue, there is a special fascination in Sunday's election. They are interested in how the country's current state of mind might affect the increasingly wider swath being cut by West Germany in the affairs of Europe. Despite the loss of almost half its prewar territory, West Germany has emerged as the unrivaled economic powerhouse of Western Europe. So pre-eminent is its economic position within the European Common Market that even the Soviet Union has found itself obliged to court Bonn in hopes of obtaining German trade and technology for its own

For a long time the West Germans were prevented by their past from exercising the political influence that is the natural companion of economic wealth. But time and events have gradually peen stripping away the constraints that relegated West Germany to the status of a parolee in the world community. Viable Democracy

First, the Christian Democrats, under their patriarch Konrad Adenauer, brought about re-entry to the West by laying the fcundations of a viable democracy and then anchoring it securely in NATO and the Common Market,

Then came the turn of Mr. Brandt and his attempt to bury the last lingering hostilities left from the war through a reconciliation with Eastern Europe, Ouly 12 days ago his Ostpolitik recorded its most dramatic achievement when Bonn turned its back on 20 years of pretending that the Communist regime in East Germany did not exist and concluded an agreement for the two German states to recognize each other's independence.

What is more, these developments secure alliance with the West and budding detente with the East-have come at a time when the United States is signaling its intention of gradually relinquishing the burdens it assumed in postwar Europe. Inevitably, this is going to leave some vacuums that the Europeans will have to fill by themselves.

Given the interdependence that institutions like the Common Market have imposed on Western Europe, it is doubtful that any one country will emerge in a position of clear-cut leadership. But when one looks at West Germany, with its economic power and its new potential to act as interiocutor between East and West, there seems little doubt that it should be among the prime movers of the coming de-

Germans themselves. There are those who doubt that they do. Sweden's Premier Olof Palme once remarked, Brandt could be elected the leader of any country in Europe—except, perhaps, his own." A Social Democrat strategist sums up his icars of what could happen Sunday by saying: "Brandt is offering the Germans a great vision—the chance to finally close the book on the past, to be not just respectable but respected. But it may well be that our people are more interested in the price of beer and cigarettes."

It's not quite that simple, of course. However, his words indicate a recognition that the voters might be tired of "big issues" and are turning inward in a way that could have very unpredictable results.

To some extent, this is an inevitable reaction to all that has happened here in the last three years. During that time, West Germany underwent what was literally a revolution in its political life. But it was a revolution totally different from what most people expected. To fully understand its effects on the average German, it is necessary to go back to the last national elections

Pressure for Change

Then the country was gripped by pressure for change. The process of reconstruction had been completed, the Christian Democrats, after two decades in power, were growing fossilized, and the established order, which reflected the bourgeois values of pre-Hitler Germany, was coming under challenge from several sides.

Part of the challenge came from the "have nots," who felt lest out of the general prosperity and who were threatening a turn toward the radical right. Part came from a young postwar generation that repudiated the au-whether it is shared by the West for the first time in the postwar period. The country settled back to see what Mr. Brandt would do about his pledge to be "the chancellor of internal reform.

Then the unexpected happened. Mr. Brandt's initial cautious probes toward the East suddenly ignited into an explosion of activity that pushed domestic considerations into the back-ground. For the next three years it was not internal reform but foreign policy, as embodied by the Ostpolitik, that would occupy the attention of the West German government, parliament and pub-

Price of Ostpolitik

The advances made by Mr. Brandt in this area went far beyond what anyone had believed possible, resulting eventually in entirely new relationships with the Soviet Union, Poland and East Germany. But it was done at a substantial price: Bonn's recognition of the division of Germany and the loss of vast former German territories absorbed by Poland and the Soviet Union after the war.

For many West Germans, particularly those with ties to the lost territories, the surrender of Bonn's claims on what had been involved an emotional wrench bordering on the traumatic. As a result, the Ostpolitik became the subject of the bitterest and most all-encompassing fight in West Germany's 23 years as an independent country.

In the end, the struggle was to cause cracks in Mr. Brandt's fragile coalition and deprive him of his parliamentary majority before he had served the four years normally allotted to a chancellor. Because of this, Sunday's elections are taking place almost a full year ahead of schedule.

Oct. 8 was the date of what is now known as the "breakthrough," the day when Hanoi presented a plan which was close enough to U.S. proposals to have resulted in the draft agreement now under consideration. Mr. Ziegler repeated remarks only "a small token" effort has been made since to force school systems into compliance with the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Judge Pratt's opinion directly linked the sudden halt in HEW enforcement of the Civil Rights Act to the appointment of Stanley Pottinger, HEW's director of civil rights, in March, 1969.

Mr. Pottinger was out of town and neither he nor his assistants could be reached for comment. HEW could appeal Judge Pratt's

Elliott Lichtman, attorney for the NAACP Legal Detense Fund, said he hoped HEW "will comply rather than stalling further where there are essentially undisputed

The judge ordered the plain-tiffs, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, to confer with HEW and draw up an order within 30 days for him to sign. The order will compel HEW to begin enforcement proceedings against school systems which have not voluntarily desegregated.

Judge Pratt found that "despite (HEW's) reluctance or failure" to enforce the Civil Rights Act, "substantial progress" toward de-segregation of the nation's school systems had been made. Since 1968 the number of Negro pupils in all-black schools in the South has dropped from 68 percent to 9.2 percent during the last school year. However, the judge's opinion also noted that the number of Negroes in majority black schools had risen during the same period from 18 to 43 percent.

In undisputed findings of fact, the judge found that public colleges and universities in Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Florida and North Carolina had "totally ignored" HEW requests for voluntary desegregation plans and that Arkansas, Georgia, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania submitted unacceptable plans.

HEW has still not commenced enforcement action against any of the 10 states, though its requests to them went out beginning in January, 1969.

In public elementary and secondary schools, 113 Southern school districts reneged two years ago on prior-approved desegrega-tion plans and 74 "are still out of compliance," Judge Pratt said. Although HEW has known of the noncompliance from the beginning in most cases, he said, it began enforcement actions against only seven, and only three of those have been sued by the Justice Department to force compliance. All continue to receive "substantial" federal funds from HEW.

Special Schools For vocational and special chools (for the blind, deaf and handicapped) in the South, HEW has had few racial statistics and "no comprehensive program" to force desegregation, the judge found. What statistics HEW did provide the court showed such schools are "overwhelmingly" seg-After filing of this suit, HEW announced an enforcement pro-

"discretionary" and that it can rely largely on voluntary compliance by school districts. Judge Pratt dismissed that argument, stating that HEW's efforts at getting voluntary compliance, when it attempted to do so, "have been unsuccessful or have met with rejection." HEW does not have "discretion to negate the purpose and intent of the (Civil Rights Act) by a policy described . . . as one of 'benign

California Ruling May Be Test for Death Penalty

NORWALK, Calif., Nov. 17 (AP).—In a ruling that could be a test case for full restoration of capital punishment in California. a superior court judge has ordered a jury to decide whether a man convicted of murder should be sentenced to life imprisonment Judge Julius A. Leetham made the ruling Wednesday in the case of Alexander Dukes, 21, convicted Tuesday in the stabbing death last January of Diane Lopez, 23. Dukes's attorney, Public Defender James Haney, said that he would petition the state district court of appeal to halt the penalty phase of the trial ordered by Judge Leetham for Nov. 27. California voters approved 2-1 a measure on the Nov. 7 ballot to restore the state's death penalty. But state Attorney General Evelle Younger has issued an opinion that capital punishment is to be considered only in cases where the legislature has previously provided a mandatory death penalty: the killing of a prison guard or other noninmate by a life-termer: treason; perjury which results in the death of another person and train-wreck-

Judge Leetham's order conceded there may be different legal opinions about the scope of the amendment. He concluded, however, that "if such constitutional amendment language is to be construed otherwise than as stated. it would appear strained and must be done by an appellate court." He added that the measure's "plain language appears clear and applicable" to the Dukes case.

Louisiana, FBI to Investigate Deaths of 2 Blacks on Campus

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 17 (AP).—Gov. Edwin Edwards an-nounced today that he would make a thorough investigation into the deaths of two young blacks at Southern University here, and acknowledged that they may have been shot accidentally by state police shotguns.

The FBI also announced that it would investigate the deaths. State police and sheriff's deputles have maintained they fired no live ammunition during yesterday's confrontation. They said they fired only tear gas.

It was determined the two young men died of buckshot wounds in the head. Students at the scene insisted they saw state policemen firing their shotguns into the crowd.

"It's perfectly logical and rea-sonable," Gov. Edwards said when one of the officers could have, in all the excitement, fired the wrong kind of ammunition. He may know of it now, and not be willing to tell."

He said the buckshot cartridges look the same as cartridges containing tear gas pellets, and that it is possible that a policeman

In Washington, Deputy Attorney General Ralph E. Erickson said the FBI would "develop all the facts relating to this unfor-tunate incident to determine whether there was any violation of federal law during the confrontation between students and law enforcement officers."

Differing Accounts The two young men died when sheriff's deputies and state police advanced to clear out the occupied administration building. As they moved in, a crowd of students was between them and the occupied building. The policemen fired tear gas into the crowd, and when the smoke lifted, the two young men lay dead in a pool of blood on the sidewalk. According to the police, the dents started the hurling a smoke bomb at the advancing police line. Students argued that the police fired tear gas first and that the students only picked up the canisters and threw them back.

A group of Southern students said there was no takeover of the administration building, as the police alleged. WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (NYT). The White House said last night that Father Theodore Hesburgh had resigned as chairman of the United States Commission on Civil Rights and that President Nixon will accept the resignation.

Gerald L. Warren, assistant White House press secretary, said the White House staff had requested the resignation. But he said the request was made because Father Hesburgh had said during the presidential campaign that he would resign if President Nixon were re-elected. Pather Hesburgh's resignation stemmed largely from a disagreement between him and the President on the issue of school busing. During the campaign Father Hesburgh described busing as "the most phony issue in the country." In South Bend, Ind., where Father Hesburgh is president of Notre Dame University, he said that he was drafting his formal resignation, but it was understood he had already acknowledged to White House staff members that he would step down.

Meanwhile, there was disagreement over whether resignations of other commission members had been requested by the White House. Several commission staff members said their resignations had been request

However, both Mr. Warren and Ron Ziegler, the White House press secretary, said it was their understanding that the other five members of the commission had not been asked to resign, that they were considered in a special category, and thus were not included in the President's request for the routine resignation of 2,000 top officials on Nov. 8. But Mr. Ziegler said the order did include John Buggs, the commission staff director, who is a presidential appointee.

Sakharov, of the unofficial Human Rights Committee, said he expected to spend about a month lecturing at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., and at New York University.

Mr. Chalidze resigned in September from the committee, which has studied such things as Soviet psychiatric hospitals where dissidents allege same persons are held because of their political views.

Wife at His Side

With his pretty, blue-eyed dark-haired wife Vers at his side, the tie-less scientist said he was still working for the committee as an expert and would be lecturing on questions of legality and the worldwide struggle for human rights.

"The reason I'm not on the committee anymore is because I'm very tired," he said, denying his resignation was connected with his trip, as some of his friends said earlier. They said others on the committee objected to a member going abroad even temporarily.

A Georgian known locally as "the prince" for his striking sat-urnine looks, Mr. Chalidge is no fire-breathing radical, but has based his whole struggle on the need for strict governmental adherence to legal norms. In July, however, the secret police, the KGB, accused him of well-masked anti-Soviet behavior" and warned he would be arrested if he did not start acting "like an ordinary citizen." With that in mind, his friends

-both Soviet and Western-said they were amazed the Soviet authorities gave permission to one of their most ardent critics to join the Western lecture circuit.

Several suggested that, once out of the Soviet Union, he might not be allowed back in when his three-month visa expires. Mr. Chalidze shrugged off the possibility and said only: "I hope everything will be in order."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (NYT). -A civilian attorney has charged that Navy intelligence officers were responsible for his ouster from Subic Bay, in the Philippines, where he had been defending dozens of black sailors in court-martial cases.

Douglas J. Sorensen: of Palo Alto, Calif., said in an interview here that Navy investigators joined with Philippine police to raid the offices of the National Law-yers' Guild last month.

Mr. Sorensen, 28, and two associates, Bart K. Lubow, of New York, and Eugens R. Parker, of Honolulu, were deported Oct. 27 by the Philippine government, nine days after their arrest.

Denying Civilian Counsel

The Navy's action, Mr. Sorensen said, had the effect of denying sailors accused of courtmartial offenses the right to American civilian counsel, provided by the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

He said that the American Civil Liberties Union and the Law Center for Constitutional Rights, in New York, would join the Lawyers' Guild in a right-to-counsel lawsuit against the Navy that would be filed here within two weeks. shootings, but detectives here discounted the claim. The Black Forget the idea that New York is the only way into America, It isn't. Try routing by Montreal or Toronto, and you'll be glad you did. Many US cities are actually nearer that way for a start, and there are connections to more than 60 of them! Then there's the congestion problem that we don't have. Canada's gateway airports are clear and easy, with far less risk of infuriating delays. So no hanging around. And Air Canada flights from 11 European cities are all ready to speed you on your way.

You won't see much of Canada but you'll like the bit you do. Because we'll treat you with consideration.

No getting on buses to go from terminal to terminal or airport to airport. And we'll get you through the US Customs and Immigration with speed and simplicity which saves you time on arrival in the USA.

In the air, too, you'll get civilised hospitality, the best a big friendly airline can offer. We cover more North American cities than any other transatiantic airline-and from London and Paris we've got 747s for extra comfort.

Accommodation With Cuba?

Latin American hand John Plank speculated presciently in 1969, "with a serious bilateral U.S.-Cuban dialogue about the hijacking problem, a matter of concern to both Castro and us and whose resolution would immediately and tangibly benefit both parties." This is the larger significance of Havana's and Washington's newly expressed interest in a hijacking dialogue, Handled properly, it could lead through cultural exchanges, claims settlements, trade talks and political relations-the familiar route-to an American detente with the only Communist state (Albania aside) still out in the cold. But given Fidel Castro's suspicions, not to say his political investment in portraying the United States as a devil, the U.S. manner in dealing with Havana is crucial. We do not stress this point only because Mr. Nixon last week gratuitously observed that he anticipated no change in Cuba's policy and, therefore, no change in his own. The success, which is to say the potential, of the hijack dialogue is at stake. Cuba has asked to discuss not only the hijacking of American planes to Cuba but the hijacking of Cuban boats to the United States and what it believes to be the closely related issue of the "illegal" flight of Cubans by means not involving hijacking (by private boats, for instance). The State Department has responded positively but, in accordance with past policy, only to the offer to discuss takeovers of American planes. We assume this response was a bargaining position, not a final position, because "the hijacking problem" cuts both ways. For the United States its essence is safety in the skies. For Cuba its essence is the security of the Castro government: by preventing its citizens from departing—last year Havana halted the six-year airlift that had brought a quarter of a million refugees to Miami-Cuba means to give them no real alternative but to accommodate to Communist rule.

It could well be that a warmer political atmosphere would make negotiation of both halves of the problem easier. The fact remains that the American interest in coping with the plane hijacking until now has been subordinated to its interest in making life a bit more difficult for Fidel Castro.

Perhaps Castro was looking anyway for a face-saving way to start coming in from the Accommodation with Cuba could begin, cold. Perhaps the Russians, tired of the cost and nuisance of supporting Cuba, gave him a nudge. At any rate, the last two hijackings have been notably different from most of the earlier ones; the last two plainly have involved a large degree of criminality and sheer danger. Mr. Castro seems to have understood that the surge of American concern over the two hijackings gave him a certain opening that he did not have or need when hijackings were the stuff of bad TV jokes. We think that, in his offer to bargain, he ought to be presumed serious until proven not so.

> We would further argue that it is not only the link between Americans' safety in the skies and Castro's legitimacy that should incline the United States to bargain seriously with Cuba. If President Nixon can deal directly with Moscow and Peking, why should the smallest and weakest of the Communist states alone be held at arm's length? In the dozen Castro years, the hemisphere has seen that neither the man nor his doctrine nor his disciples, certainly not his example in Cuba, has excited "revolution" anywhere beyond his borders. Castro himself now makes no more than a ritual appeal for the cause which a few fearful Americans, but virtually no realistic Latins, identify with his name. Nor in a period of détente with the Soviet Union, and of intercontinental and submarine-launched missiles, does it make political or military sense to overdo the old worry that Moscow will make

> In reaching out to Cuba, there is a certain problem in reassuring those American allies who, either in response to American entreaties or for reasons of their own, supported the political and economic boycott of Havana which the United States organized a decade ago. But last June at the Organization of American States, no fewer than seven Latin states declared that each country should make up its own mind on Cuba. Some particularly insecure or repressive Latin governments may need some special handholding. But surely that problem is manageable.

> To be sure, Fidel Castro remains a very tough and fractious fellow to deal with. We would be the last to say, however, that he's too tough for Richard Nixon.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

As the world approached the year A.D. 1000, it was clear to serious thinkers that was a division of opinion, among the experts, over the precise meaning of the portents. Some analysts expected the day of judgment, while others forecast only plagues and tempests. But informed men were all able to agree that, as they used to put it in the 10th century, mankind was passing a major milestone. Much the same can be said of the announcement that now, for the first time, the Dow Jones industrial average has closed above 1.000.

The Dow Jones average, over the past generation, has moved mainly upward, in celebration of this country's accumulating wealth, It reached 400 in 1954, 600 in 1958, and came very close to the magical 1,000 in both 1966 and 1968. In the spring of 1970 it swooped down to 631, then started back up toward its present level. The current surge is the effect of the recovery from the recent recession. Profits are running higher than most people had expected. In the background there is President Nixon's re-election, his wage and price controls, and the prospect of peace in Victnam. The atmosphere is reassuring to the 30 million Americans who own and trade in stock.

The stock market is a great national institution that provides the only really respectable form of gambling that is available to Americans. A man who spends his the end of the millennium would be an days and nights playing the horses, even if event of very great significance. The he makes money at it, is regarded as prevalence of visions, and the astral mani- mentally unstable and a menace to public festations, made that much clear, But there morals, But if he expends the same time and obsession on the stock market, so long as he is able to avoid bankruptcy, he remains a pillar of the community and an example to its youth. The genius of the stock market is its success in harnessing the American passion for gambling to the vast requirements of industrial growth. Building great industries is a highly risky and expensive process, with dozens of failures littering the road to every triumph. Inducing society to finance this costly process of trial and error is not so simple. But by organizing it as a vast game combining luck, skill and pure nerve, like poker, American industry has assured itself of a voluntary flow of capital on a scale that the harshest dictator would hesitate to extract from his people by force.

Wall Street's millennium is, according to the insiders, a matter of very little real meaning. But it is the kind of symbol that catches the imagination, and accurately suggests the enormous increase in American wealth over the past generation. One large question about the market now is whether it will remain reasonably accessible to the small private investor, or be taken over by the very large institutions that increasingly dominate its internal life. Uncertainty in Vietnam

South Vietnam must now prepare for a not-too-distant time when it will have to make for more independent decisions than previously and rely upon itself. This leads to a psychological situation which hardly tits the official version of things, according to which the country has successfully fended off an invasion and handed the enemy a defeat. Some objective observers are comparing the present situation to the end of 1964. One difference, however, is the existence of a more or less compact South Vietnamese Army, which did not crumple under Hanoi's Easter offensive but at the same time could not have held its own without enormous U.S. air support. The army physically "controls" more than 80 percent of the population, but most of the people are sunk in political apathy. This need not be to the disadvantage of the Thieu regime, but neither does it give it a comfortable safety margin in counteracting re-infiltrated Communists after a cease-fire. Away from the bustle of Saigon, tangible uncertainty is the sole factor that heads every balance sheet now being drawn up in this land.

The Creative Pause

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—The 10 weeks between the November election of the President of the United States and his inauguration on Jan 20 are probably more important than any other 10 weeks of his four or eight year stay in the White House.

For in this short span, the President can change his team, change his mind, change the whole tone of his administration, retain his most effective men and retire the rest, correct past mistakes, and adjust his policies and personnel to the changing problems of the future.

Maybe this is what is meant by the "genius" of the democratic political system. At least in the executive branch of the government, it makes allowances for the accidents and fragility of human life, and liberates the President

Freedom to Act

Nobody else at the top of other large American institutions, with the possible exception of football coaches and baseball managers. has such freedom to act on reality, and even they can be fired over the telephone after any same that soes wrong.

The only trouble with the system is that it isn't applied as widely as it might be. The President isn't stuck with the seniority system, but the Congress is. Who among the presidents and chief executives of corporations, universities, or hamburger stands wouldn't like to have the resignations of their colleagues on their desks every four years?

Think of the possibilities. The Congress could promote the young men who are coming instead of being stuck with the old men who are going. The church could send its weary bishops and preachers off to some

has recognized that he is the envy of every other chief executive in the land, and he is taking advantage of his special position. He knew that it was the custom after any election for all his appointees to put their resignations at his disposal, but he didn't count on their good taste or manners. He had his press secretary announce publicly that he not only expected their resignations, but that he intended to act on them, and maybe separate as many as 2,000 top officials from the federal service.

This put him in an awkward position, as The Washington Post was quick to point out. For he had defended everything and everybody in his administration during the election campaign, and asked, "Why break up a winning team," but now he was threatening to break it up, as if he were breaking up an old Democratic administration instead of his own, him for being tough on his own team and looking to the future. This may be the best thing about Nixon. He peddles a lot of baloney, but he doesn't swallow it himself. Accordingly, substantial cuts in the bureaucracy could undoubtedly be made with profit. 35-Nation Meeting

The Diverse Goals Of European Security

By James Goldsborough

PARIS. More than six years after it was first proposed by the Warsaw Pact countries, the European security conference becomes a reality next Wednesday when 35 nations meet in Helsinki to begin consultations.

All the nations of Europe, excluding Albania and Andorra but including the Vatioan, Liechten-stein, San Marino, Monaco, Maita and Cyprus, will meet for what is officially called the multilateral preparations for the Conference on European Security and Cooperation (CESC). The only two non-European states present will be the United States and Canaca, which is why the name was changed from the European conference to the conference on Eu-

If ever the goals of an international meeting were diverse, those of this one are. It is all things to all people. To some of the participants, the Reisinki preparations are the opening of the road to reconciliation of the blocs and a new European order. To others, it is a Soviet trick to separate Europe from America and recognize de facto Soviet hegemony. To still others, it is a chance to escape, a tiny hit, from that same hegemony.

Proposed in 1966

Originally proposed in the Bucharest Declaration of 1966, the idea at first aroused little interest in the West. It was seen largely as a Soviet propaganda exercise aimed at winning recognition of the division of Europe and the sovereignty of East Germany. The Warsaw Pact's invasion of Czechoslovakia two years later sent the project further into limbo. But in 1969 the Warsaw Pact members, meeting, ironically, in Prague, issued a new call for the Though their meeting came less than a year after their invasion of the same city, the Pact members urged a conference to proclaim the "renunciation of the use of force or the threat of its use in mutual relations between states in Europe.'

They also recommended that the CESC achieve a "widening commercial, economic and technical-scientific relations and political cooperation between European states."

Following the invasion of Czechoslovakia and throughout much of 1969, the Western nations, particularly the NATO members, dismissed any idea of a CESC as untimely. But in the Soviet détente offensive that began in 1969, and which was not unrelated to the diplomatic disaster that Czechoslovakia represented for the Soviet bloc, the Western nations began to see ways in which a conference could be useful

It was decided that a series of links would be made, tests of Soviet intentions, beginning with Berlin agreement was to cost East German party leader Walter Ulbricht his job before it was completed, the Russians delivered.

The CESC also was linked more indirectly to a successful SALT accord and an agreement between East and West Germany, and in both cases satisfactory results were obtained.

Russians Press

The more the Russians pressed for CESC, the more links were found. The most recent was with Soviet agreement to enter into mutual and balanced force reductions talks (MBFR). Though the Russians agreed again, the NATO countries made it clear that MBFR and CESC were to be parallel and that any success was also to be parallel.

Sir Also Douglas-Home, the British foreign secretary, probably best summed up the West's at-titude toward CESC during a recent visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Lon-don. After patiently listening to Mr. Gromyko explain the wellknown Soviet reasons for wanting the conference, Sir Alec replied: "It's perfectly all right with me. Mr. Foreign Minister, but what are we going to talk about?" The NATO countries, at least, have spent a good many years arguing about what to talk about, As Sir Alec indicated, the feeling is now that if the Soviet Union wants to talk in generalities about the inviolability of frontiers and the noninterference in the affairs of others, NATO is more interested in concrete progress.

This has been put in different ways by different countries. The United States has described the purpose of the CESC as to "help break down barriers in Europe and help create a more normal atmosphera between individual countries through freer movement of people, ideas and information." Specifically, this means that the Warsaw Pact countries are going to have to talk about mak ing it easier to travel between East and West, and about the future of the Berlin Wali and the death strip between East an West Germany. French Pres. dent Georges Pompidou has de scribed this as greater "inter penetration."

NATO Secretary-General Jc

seph Luns said during a vis

here last week that "meaningle

declarations will not be suff

cient." He said the CESC should establish a set of principles this would make the so-called Brezh ney doctrine of "limited or pro letarian sovereignty" more diff cuit to apply. Mr. Luns al called for some specific militar agreements such as advan warnings for troop maneuve and exchanges of observers. Mr. Luns described how had been talking of such matte recently with a Bulgarian of cial who asked him if he men that he was urging the end the Breshney doctrine. Who Mr Luns said he was, the Br garian replied. "Will you plea turn to the next item on tagenda." The story gives a pr view of what the CESC has But the conference will not made up of the seven Wars Pact and 15 NATO member alone. There will be 13 off countries present, and several these, countries like Yugoslav Austria, host Finland and ev Warsaw Pact member Roman enter the conference extreme interested in how the Sov Union will deal with calls ! interpenetration and declaratic on limited sovereignty.

Each Vulnerable

Each of these countries vulnerable in various ways and seeking in the Soviet desire 1 European détente concrete we in which it can guarantee fut Soviet actions, and in cases it Romania obtain greater man for maneuver. In many w there appears to be a contract tion between what the Sov Union and its Romanian ally a in the CESC. The Romania for example, are known to we the establishment of a permanbody with teeth to which a i tion could appeal if it was any way threatened.

The Romanians, the Finns ! several other smaller count are also leading the call for end to the blocs at the CESC, t is NATO and the Wasaw P Aware of this, NATO is alresending out alarm signals waiting that the Russians will probably favor this, knowing NATO is a much more integri-alliance than the Warsaw The Albanian absence at conference is due to their relations with the People's Rilic of China and the Chinese tility to CESC. China is the member of the Big Five the root be participating and the Conference of the Big Five the contract of the Big Five th nese have said they feel this all a Soviet maneuver to ach stability in Europe in order bring greater pressure in Asia

This is certainly a princ Soviet objective in urging CESC. and to many observe at least as important to the E slans as is achieving a dimini American presence in Europe The Helsinki preparations expected to last several mot and their success will determ when the conference itself underway. Judging from the presently separating the 35 cc tries on several issues, it could many months. An example of this guif given recently by Frigyes P the Hungarian vice-minister foreign affairs. In a detailed ticle on the CESC, Mr. Puja w. that the real difficulty was a European détente was no American liking.

"The development of impr relations between the capit and socialist European countr wrote Mr. Puja, "would raise"; is danger that capitalist Eu !! slips from American control; in turn would render impos the use of European capit countries in the global plan American imperialism."

LYONS, France, Nov. 17 (IHT). -The former head of the vice squad here was arrested today and charged with protecting a network of prostitution in some of the city's hotels.

At the same time, a former member of the vice squad was sentenced to jail for his part in a prostitution ring.

The crackdown on the Lyons prostitution network began last summer. Several hotels for prostitutes have been closed down and some of the madams and procurers have been sentenced to prison terms ranging up to four

The arrest of police commissloner Louis Tonnot, 43, extended the crackdown to the higher echelons of the police, some of whose members were alleged to have protected prostitution hotel operators for several years. Procuring-but not prostitution-has been illegal in France since the end of World War II.

The police officer sentenced today, Jean Simonin, 48, was arrested several mouths ago. He was sentenced to three years' imprisonment—two of them sus-pended—and fined 70,000 francs. He was one of five persons sentenced today in connection with the prostitution scandal.

Simonin was found guilty of closing down hotels used by prostitutes so that a former police officer friend, Pierre Isnard, could buy them.

Isnard, who was sentenced today to two years in jail—21 months suspended—and fined 50,000 francs, was said to have sold the hotels later at higher

New Parleys Slated by U.K. And Iceland

In Search for Accord On Fishing Rights

LONDON, Nov. 17 (AP),-Eritain and Iceland agreed today to try once again for a truce in their prolonged dispute over fishing

The Foreign Office announced that ministers of the two countries-allies within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization-will meet in Reykjavik Nov. 27 and 28. Earlier negotiations broke down last August.

Lady Tweedsmuir, minister of state for foreign affairs, will head the British team, which will include representatives of the fishing industry as well as government experts.

The dispute, which also involves West Germany, flared following an Icelandic decision to extend its fishing zone from 12 to 50 miles. The new limits came into effect Sept. 1. with British trawlers defying the unilateral ruling

Britain took the issue to the International Court of Justice in The Hague and won an injunction that called on Iceland to suspend action until the merits and legality of the move could be examined. But the midatlantic nation had said in advance that it would not recognize the court's jurisdiction.

A series of talks between the two countries through this year has falled thus far to yield a compromise that would permit British trawlermen to go on working the disputed waters on the basis of catch limitations. The new round of talks has a primary aim of avoiding incldents at sea between British trawlers and Icelandic gunboats. A parallel aim is to seek a stopgap compromise that would leave each country's position of principle intact while allowing limited fishing to go on.

Swedish Prison Factory Paying Inmates on Open-Market Scale

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 17 (AP).-Immates at a Swedish prison yesterday began getting wages on a par with those paid on the open market and now pay for their "board and lodging."

The latest experiment in Sweden's advanced prison policies gives the 98 inmates at the Tillberga open prison factory an average tax-free salary of about 1,300 crowns-$360-per month. The wages for the prisoners, who make wooden houses for a government firm, compare well with the average after taxes in the wood-products industry. They are paid 7 to 9 crowns-

$1.40 to $1.80--per hour. Besides paying some costs, such as 11 crowns-$2.20-for three daily meals on weekdays, the inmates will have to make payments toward damages awarded by courts to individuals and the state. With other debts, such as alimony and rent on the outside, about 250 crowns—$50—is left as "pocket money" for the immates. The Tillberga factory is outside the town of Vasteras in central Sweden. Its immates are serving sentences of a few months up to life. All prison inmates who have served most of their sentences can apply for transfer to Tillberga. But requirements are high for proven good behavior and work merits. Over the past month more than 60 prisoners have applied, but the quota is filled for the time being

The pay experiment will continue until next April in a first stage. If the results are judged worthwhile, the system will be extended to other institutions.

Renew Call for Peace

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (NYT). -Recalling their exhortation a year ago for an end to the Vietnam war "with no further delay," the Catholic bishops of the United States yesterday expressed hope for a successful outcome of the present peace negotiations and appealed to both sides for an end to "bombing and terrorism."

The resolution, adopted after prolonged debate, appeared in general to be less sharp than the 1971 resolution, which was the bishops' first call for an end to the war. However, Auxiliary Bish-op Thomas J. Gumbleton of Detroit, who lea the move strengthen the document, said it was, in a way, better than a year ago because it does refer ex-plicitly to the bombing."

Paris Takes Avant-Garde Lead

By Souren Melikian

PARIS, Nov. 17 (IHT).—This week Paris has scored against London, earning en easy lead for the avant-garde art market in Europe. This is the first significant victory in two years for the French eyer their London rivals.

Parisian auctioneers—including Jean-Chude Binoche, René Laurin and Manrice Rheims (before he retired)—bave been laying the groundwork for some time with a series of sales. This week it paid off. It is now clear that only New York can rival Paris as a place to sell avant-garde art.

René Laurin's 2.6-million franc sale at the Espace Cardin-Laurin was the first to get the couturier's ultra-modern theatrical complex as a setting for an auction. Originally, Jean-Claude Binoche had been scheduled to sell an important group of contemporary works there on Tuesday. He advertised his sale as the first-ever at Espace Cardin. A Gallic clash remited and it took an official arbitrator to sort it out. The recult: Binoche's sale is taking place tonight and tomorrow.

Be that as it may, the Laurin sale on Wednesday was successful. The clamor over who would get to the Espace Cardin first proved that forward-locking French auctioneers understand the importance of the right setting for a given sale, even if they need a referee to keep them from each other's throats.

Laurin had much to offer Wednesday night, with works by the best-known contemporary American artists. Among them, Frank Stella ("Small Muller," discussed and illustrated in a Museum of Modern Art book), Andy Warhol ("Troy." in Crone's catalogue raisonné of Warhol's work), et al. Moreover, 37 lots in the sale were part of a collection sent from Switzerland with the obvious intention of testing the French

While the Espace Cardin is ideal for displaying avant-garde work This was obvious Wednesday at in its spacious, superbly laid out premises, the room where the sale took place did not live up to expectations. It was too long, making it difficult to people in the back to get a good view. On several occasions, the auctioneer remarked that he could not see

Mr. Cardin said that the last minute rush had led to some improvisation and pointed out television floodlights had completely altered the lighting originally planned. The Binoche suction will be in the large theater and conditions should be much better.

The combination of what Mr. Leurin and Mr. Binoche were offering for sale in one week brought a highly knowledgeable group of international collectors was packed, on Wednesday, with Americans, Germans, Swiss and Italians. As was to be expected, le Tout-Paris was there as well. Hélène Roches, who has a notable collection of Arts Deco, got Tom Wesselmann's "Great American Still Life No. 20," an oil and collage (122 centimeters square, dated 1962) for 110,000 francs. Paris notaires were there, too. They shed their conservative ways sufficiently to acquire some rather far-out works. One paid 23,600 francs for a sur-realistic composition by Roberto Foreign dealers came in large numbers, · A Bolognese gallery paid 22,500 francs for Arman's Accumulation of Yellow and Tubes," compressed between sheets of plexiglass, signed and dated 1967. A Geneva gallery acquired a Manzoni for 7,380 francs. This was a plain brown parcel, tied with string and seals, fixed on canvas (60 by 90 centimeters).

Important works fatched, on the whole his prices. For example, Roy Lichtenstein's "Hot Dog With Mustard" (1963: went up to 77,500 francs. All the inexpensive lots (5,000 francs or under) sold easily, no doubt because young French collectors were bid-However, one such col-Alain Gaston Dreyfus bought Arman's "Cachets 1900." ink on paper (27 by 21 centi-meters) for 2,070 france and then bid 18,200 francs for Tinguely's "Radio WNYR No. 7."

Reserve Prices

In a few cases, excessive reserve prices stood in the way of sales. While the auction total of over 2.6 million francs was a very satisfactory sum from the auctioneer's viewpoint, several major works found no takers, as René Laurin quite frankly admitted. "We are selling a mosterpiece by Tom Wesselmann," said the expert as he presented "Great American Nude No. 31." The audience was cool to what was unquestionably an important picture. Moreover, it is unusual for a French expert to make this and of comment and some professionals found it irritating. When a Jasper Johns work, "Zone" (152 by 91 centimeters, 1962) was put up with a starting price of 200,060 francs, the audience was taken aback. In spite of its excellent prevenance (collection of Mrs. William Sisler of New York) and its academic credentials (discussed in Max Koz-loff's book, "Jasper Johns"), it Andy Warhol's "Trey" (208 centimeters square) came up four minutes later and was again introduced as a masterpiece ("It s'agit d'un chej-d'oeuvre"). The masterpiece did not stir the bidders, who dropped out at 185,000 francs, which was below the reserve price.

After the sale, Mr. Laurin pointed out that prices for these sorts of works are becoming inter-The Wednesday nationalized. prices were in much the same range as those at Parke-Bernet last month. But optimistic vendors set high reserves in the hope that the market is becoming speculative-a vain hope, for the

Mr. Laurin added that last June, at another avant-garde auction, several pictures were bought in because of exaggerated reserve prices. But on Wednesday. 90 percent of the works were sold because the owners had agreed not to maintain imposreserves. The result was that the prices were about "nor-

Doubtless the Binoche sale tonight and tomorrow will confirm the pre-eminence of Paris in avant-garde auctions in Europe. Which may prove that the French are not so conservative. One of the few bargains in the as they may seen In contrest to French efforts, London auctioneers have done little or nothing to pave the way they would bring. The most striking rise in prices concerned ertists whose work ranks among the finest achievements in 18thcentury painting but has gained scant recognition outside Britain. A Francis Towne, "Houses at Ambleside" (1786), was bought by a private collector for 25,040.

sale was a masterpiece by Alexander Cozens bought by Baskett & Day for £600. The same gallery bought two of Towne's finest works, both dated 1786 for £8,990 and £3,150-four times the preauction estimate.

In Paris Guy Portier made a sensational discovery in identitying the signature of Zeishin, the Japanese lacquer worker, on an inro, which had been brought to him for auction. It fetched 33,300 francs at a sale attended by collectors from the States, Japan and Germany. The inro had been offered as an unsigned piece in the trade for two years and had found no takers.

When Only English Will Do -Peter Brook's 'King Lear'

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss.

Mr. Brook showed it the other evening at the Faculté des Sciences to a group of medic students. The students were appreciative and remained to questi the director on various aspects of his adaptation. If the Columbia overlords persist in detaining the film on pecuniary grounds, why not pass the hat? It is scandalcus that a motion picture of such high intelligence, lofty aim and incontestable quality should remain unavailable to non-

English-speaking audiences. The film 'Lear" differs entirely from Brook's celebrated stage production, though Paul Scoffeld is again the harassed monarch. was shot in the northern reaches of wintertime Denmark The severity of the bleak setting is in harmony with the stark tragedy. It is in no sense a photographed play and, despite the location expedition, twothirds of it is in close-ups, some what after the manner of Carl Dreyer's slient "Jeanne d'Arc."

Lear is conventionally presented as a beset creature who, under the relentless pressures of evil and pain, loses his mind and eventually, overwhelmed by grief at the loss of the one dearest to him, passes into death, Brook, with a more exotic analysis, begins with a Lear who appears to have suffered a stroke, a logical explanation of his fatal division of his kingdom and its fall into the hands of his dreadful daughters. The dialogue has been edited for cinematic use and is fitted into cross-section takes. To keep the action clear in the spectator's mind a few titles have been inserted. There are three superb per formances: that of Scofield as the vanquished father, that of Irene Worth as the heartlers harpie, Goneril, and that of Jack MacGowran as the wise, worldweary fool. But all the acting is impressive under Brook's careful guidance. Here is a provocative and fascinating interpretation of a literary masterpiece.

YORK -At the Whitney sum the other day I unfor the first time-in a not too logical way-the underful sense of discovby the character in the play who learns with nent that "for 40 years I speaking prose without t." I realized that for an 40 years I have been the closest possible id not knowing it, with the competition of city lights, magically burnished every curving path, every tree, every silvery lake and pond.

But until studying the new Whitney Museum exhibition I never understood the fautastic job Olmsted did literally sculpturing that park, as he carted 10 million loads of soil and rock into and out of it, laid down miles of drainage pipes, all to create these mounds and ravines, those small gorges and lovely promenades, those meandering lakes that look so enchantingly unpremeditated. To me Central Park before Olmsted designed it was that rocky, hilly, goat-ridden wasteland behind the squatters' shacks I knew from Ralph Blakelock's early canvases painted from what is now Central Park South, Somehow I had imagined the essential structure of terrain and water was there, and that Olmsted's genius lay in extensive and brilliant innovative remodelling, and, hardly less than that, in his tireless coddling of and fighting with corrupt city politicians, necessary just to preserve the area as a creensward.

also learned at the show that other areas of the city which I have lived in loving intimacy are Olmsted's too-Riverside Drive and park, for instance. One gallery at the Whitney is given over entirely to a circular screen on which are projected some 35 panoramic images of Olmsted's New York (including Brooklyn, where he designed Prospect Park).

examples of his designs and plans for national parks (Yosemite, for one), and for parks and planned nities in other cities. Fortunately the exhibition, in a second version now on view at Washington's National Gallery, will be circulated to museums throughout the country. Olmsted was, unquestionably, the first great conservationist, ecologist, urban planner and sociologist in our history. This, bowever, is a public love letter to a man I now realize for the first time was perhaps the greatest and certainly the most innovative artist America has yet produced. He is also the only one I would trust in that role in which Shelley cast poets when he described them as "the unac-knowledged legislators of the present great interest in American post-impressionism. For me he was never out of fashion. This memorial exhibition (he died in 1970, aged 86) is as fresh and spontaneous as ever. On the technical side his great gift was to be able to indicate a shape with the most cursory, careless seeming lines (as in the hills of the work called "Cataline Mountains") and have it stand with great solidity. But for me his inimitable skill lay in his power to portray people, flowers, rooms, fields vibrant with sparkling sunfirmly together in a way that somehow seemed peculiarly American in its unvielding realism.

Pcter Saul, Galerie Darthea Spey er, 6 Rue Jacques Callot, Paris 6, to Dec. 2.

In acid greens and shocking pinks Peter Saul's paintings use an idiom related to that of the American underground comics and aim at jolting the American publi: in its most sensitive parts. Sex and money, sex and race, sex and war are among the couplings he effects, colored with the sour irony of hideous phonetic spelling. The effect is extremely curious because it is hard to discover the artist's own point of view and it appears in fact that he is not expressing it: What he is doing, as he told me, is to express the paranoid nightmare of the hypothetical average hardhat. means that his work is an "objective construction rather than a subjective statement. This sort prophetic tactic involves a lot of risk, including that of being misconstrued, But it is undoubtedly effective as provocation.

Jean Amado, Galerie Jeanne Bucher, 58 Rue de Seine, Paris 6, to Nov. 30.

Jean Amado creates large constructions in baked concrete inspired by the fortress-like rock formations that are part of the Provençal landscape. His technical ability appears to be increasingly flexible and the scale of the works grows larger too: The biggest piece is about 12 feet long, 6 feet high and 4 wide. There is an attractive sort of adolescent fantasy to the rock-fortress-ships he imagines. and the caverns and galleries one discovers within them,

Kandinsky, Galerie Karl Flinker, 25 Rue de Tournon, Paris 6, to

Dec. 9. This new gallery's opening exhibition is devoted to over 100 works and objects by Kandinsky which have never before been displayed. A notebook filled with drawings of which a limited facsimile edition has been made on the occasion of this exhibition, oil paintings, watercolors and gouaches, engravings, jewelry, a tapestry, a cup and saucer decorated by Kandinsky in a limited edition in 1922, paintings on glass, and a project for four frescoes which were hever executed but which will be used to decorate the future National Museum of Modern Art which is abuilding on the Plateau Beaubourg in Paris.

Ottesen, Galerie Coard, 12 Rue Jacques Callot, Paris 6, to Dec. 7. Norwegian-born American artist Ottesen's paintings have an ex-pressionist tone that reminds one of certain aspects of the COBRA manner. Figures with just a pair of eyes—sometimes geometric figures at that-suggest a peculiarly Nordic form of anxiety. Some drawings too, delicately done with a roving line.

Le Yaouanc, Galerie Hervé Odermatt, 85 bis Rue du Faubourg Saint Honoré, Paris 8, to Dec. 1. Alain Le Yaouanc is a rather young artist (32) who had some Maeght—one last year of collages, The present show includes both paintings and collages. A very talented artist with a highly developed sense of style and a taste for stylistic ellusions, Le Yaouanc tends towards a basically formalist cutlook. Lines, geometric forms, floating commas are some of the standard elements of his vocabulary and carry reminiscences of theories and innovations of the period between the wars.

Trova, sculpture. Galerie Kriwin, 20 Rue de Belle-Vuc, Brussels, to Nov. 25.

Ernest Trova's mannikins are making their first appearance in Europe. Cleanly constructed to unfurl on flanges, these gleaming automatons, known in New York as his "Falling Man" series, are sculpted with skill, precision and almost frightening detachment. Buttocks are sectioned from torso; scalps, neatly detachable; stomachs, sheared from diaphragm. Reduced to the level of a toy, the figures pose and split apart, prodded by a pistol welded onto the back, a can opener attached to the front. ...

Wayne Campbell, sculpture. Galerie Arges, 278 Avenue Louise, Brussels, to Nov. 25. This Los Angeles artist, showing in Europe for the first time, uses rough wood, cardboard and rocks for his creations. Most of his work is padded with complicated symbolism and involved wordplay, thus requiring detailed textual explanations. Visually, the work is undemanding. A construction of nailed-together planks weaves across the floorthe abstract idea of a boat. But nearby hangs a wide wooden arrow shape, resting on seven straw-bottomed chairs, bearing the legend "Seven Seas," Seven seas . . . seven seats. Little subtlety and rather naive sym-

Alexandra Monnett, 262 Avenue Louise, Brussels, to Nov. 40. John Manning's paintings are soft in color and hard in edge. Architectural forms, graceful, round-capped towers with decorative chimney shapes, placed high on hillcrests as Greek temples. With their sharply defined shadows, the misty gray buildings are close to pure abstractions. No human presence intrudes to provide an identifying clue. "They're siles in upstate New York," says the artist. "The old ones were built with real artistry, more like agricultural cathedrals than farm buildings." Painted in delicate dawn colors, lonely and remote, they seem more surreal than functional. Manning's show is in a new Brussels gallery, opened recently by two Americans, Barbara Beech and Sandy Monnett,

It says much for the merits of the production that it survives

Paul Zindel's "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" at the Hampstead Theatre Club is one of those plays that demonstrate the unbridgeable gap between English and American sensibilities. A great Off-Broadway success, it won an Obie, a Pulitzer Prize, and the Drama Critics' Circle Award. It has also been turned into a film, directed by Paul Newman and starring Joanne Woodward, which is already, before its release, creating great

It is a bad play. Indeed, an atroclous one, a soggy piece of autobiographical sentimentality, absurdly inflated, that is as poverty-stricken as the family it depicts: nutty mother (Sheila Hancock), and her two daughters, one conventional and unbalanced (Pamela Moiseiwitsch), and the other withdrawn but brilliant (Yvonne Antrobus), who are locked together in love-hate relationships.

Sheila Hancock gives an authoritative but in no way good performance as the eccentric mother, while Miss Antrobus's quietly understated performance still cannot make acceptable the lyrical addresses to the atom with which the play is replete. Much better is Hapstead's late-night show, a revival of "Dames at Sea," a nostalgic tribute to, and pastiche of, those Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler musicals of the 1930s, with book and lyrics by George

Haimsohn and Robin Miller, and music by Jim Wise. The cast performs this collection of lovingly recalled cliches of backstage musicals with zest and evident delight, although the tap-dancing is somewhat thunderous. There is little room on the cramped stage for any Busby Berkeley-style routines, although everyone twirls umbrellas to great effect in the number "Raining in My Heart." Pip Hinton is splendidly predatory as the aging star. Debbie Bowen properly cute as the chorus girl who conquers Broadway, and Barbara Young almost steals the show, just as Joan Blondell

Peter Cook and Dudley Moore open in a new revue, "Behind the Fridge" at the Cambridge Theatre on Tuesday.

FTC, Pepsico Reach Agreement The Federal Trade Commission says Pepsico

Inc. has agreed to maintain Rheingold Corp. as a separate concern if it succeeds in acquiring control of it. As a result, the FTC, which Wednesday issued a complaint challenging the proposed acquisition as anti-competitive, says it has dropped plans to seek a court order requiring Pepsico to keep Rheingold's operations separate. Pepsico has agreed not to take any steps "to assume or exercise actual control of Rheingold or to take any steps to make any changes in the corporate structure, board of directors or management of Etheingold" before Dec. 4 this year. After that date, Pensico will not make any changes without giving the FTO at least 10 days written notice. the FTC says. In return, the FTC has agreed not to file the action until Dec. 4 or later.

Accord on Nuclear Fuel Plant

Westinghouse Electric Corp. and Steag AG, of Germany, have agreed to form a company to design and manufacture nuclear fuel for electric generating stations in Europe. Westinghouse says the new concern will build a plant near Essen and expects to be able to ship fuel assemblies by 1975. Steag is a producer of electricity.

Olin to End Aluminum Operations Olin Corp. plans to dispose of its aluminum business and certain chemical and defense-related ordnance facilities, resulting in an after-tax writeoff of about $80 million to be taken in the 1972 fourth quarter. The extraordinary charge is equal to $3.33 a share. The operations involved have had net losses of about $8.8 million, or 37 cents a share, so far this year, the company says. The extraordinary charge will result in a reported loss for 1972, but will not affect Olin's growth plans or the current 88 cents annual dividend, the company says.

Boise Cascade to Sell Units

Boise Cascade Corp. is selling two of its engineering and construction subsidiaries to Halliburton Co. for $65 million, payable in cash or by a short-term note on or before Jan. 30, 1973. The two subsidiaries are Ebasco Services Inc. and Vernon Graphics Inc. Boise says the transaction was approved by directors of both companies and expected to be closed in January. The sale represents the second major step taken during the last month in Boise's program to provide at least $200 million in capital through the sale of nonrealty assets. Boise says that as a result of this sale it will realize an extraordinary gain of about $30 million after deducting $20 million of related

French, German Firms Regrouping

The regrouping of the electronic components divisions of the Thomson-Brandt group, of France, and those of AEG-Telefunken will be managed by a Luxembourg-based holding company equally owned by the parent firms, French sources report. They stress, however, that negotiations between Thomson-CSF, the electronics division of the Thomson-Brandt group, and the German firm are continuing. It is also planned to set up a Frenchbased company. Eurosem, which will be owned by the Luxembourg holding company.

Japan Cuts Import Tariffs by 20 Percent

The cabinet decided today to cut Japan's import tariffs 20 percent on 1,865 classifications of goods effective Nov. 22. The move is expected to increase imports by about $300 million in the next 12 months, a government spokesman

Plans for the tariff cut had been announced last month as part of the government's "third ven defense rlan."

The cabinet also added five categories of goods to 2 list of products that can be imported into Japan in finished form under a low tariff structure after being previously exported in the form of components. The five new items are radio receivers, recorders, reproducers, earphones and tuners for television sets.

Banks Eye Curb Of Euromarket

LUXEMBOURG, Nov. 17 (AP-DJ),—Rinaldo Ossola, deputy governor of the Bank of Italy, told a Euromarket symposium today that central banks are still studying ways of regulating the Eurocurrency markets.
Mr. Ossola said the Eurodollar market had been expanding much more rapidly than desirable. He said that in the six months. ended June 30 the net size of the Eurodollar market, after inter-bank deposits had been eliminated, totalled $66 billion, an increase of about $11.5 billion from the beginning of the year. The net amount of other Eurocurrencies decreased in the same period by about $500 million to $16 billion.

Had the Bovis plan been approved, the key management position in P & O would have passed to millionaire Frank Sanderson, the Bovis chief who made his fortune in property and building deals.

Bitter Fight The battle for the management of P & O was a bitter one and sparked the resignation of four

P & O directors from the 16-

man board. Under the Geddes plan P & O would have paid £130 million for the Bovis enterprise to bring in skilled modern management for their finances and huge property

Opponents of the proposals wanted P & O to stay only in shipping and regain profitability under the control of experienced shipowners and transport experts. P & O had long been seen as a possible target for a take-over, but Mr. Geddes and his supporters decided to move first and proposed the deal with Bovis. They argued it would give profits, faster growth and better prospects. Bidders Expected Financial quarters believe that once a new chairman is elected, bidders for P & O will emerge. One of these is Lord Inchcape, who has been a working director for P & O for 20 years and has already announced his intention to seek control of the shipping

He was the first of the four P & O directors to resign weeks ago in opposition to the Geddes plan. Lord Inchcape sat silent throughout today's crowded

Poor Nations Seen Issue By U.S., EEC

Topic for Trade Talks By Gerd Wilcke

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYT). -The head of the Common Market commission and President Nixon's chief trade negotiator acknowledged here yesterday that there was pressure to improve relations between industrialized nations and developing countries.

Ambassador William D. Eherle, Mr. Nixon's special representative for trade negotiations, and Sicco Mansholt, the president of the EEC commission, agreed that the issue would be a major topic at the international trade negotiations beginning next year.

However, they seemed less in agreement on how help to de-veloping nations can be im-

Mr. Mansholt, who appeared with Mr. Eberle at a news conference after both addressed a symposium of the committee for economic development, said that the community was seeking cooperation with the United States and others to better help poorer

He said that major points that needed discussion included preferential tariffs, commodity agreements and increased imports of manufactured goods from developing by industrialized nations.

Differs on Summit

Mr. Eberle, who just returned from the ministerial meeting of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, also seemed to differ with Mr. Mansholt on the need for a summit meeting of heads of government of the industrial nations before a new round of trade negotiations gets under way a year from now.

With general elections now only five months away, Finance Minis-ter Valery Giscard d'Estaing has already ruled out a wage and price freeze on the lines of the British and American measures.

Under the measures announced today banks will now have to deposit with the Bank of France 33 percent of the total credits they have granted to customers. Up to now they have worked on a double rate of 4 percent and

The effect will be to raise the amount banks have to place with the central bank from 28 billion francs to 32 billion francs, informed sources said.

New Fed Rules on Banking Cause Massive Fund Flow

By H. Erich Heinemann

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYT) .--The Federal Reserve System's overhaul of its rules governing bank reserves and check clearing -which went into effect Nov. 9 produced massive flows of funds among the nation's commercial banks, the Fed reported yesterday.

But because of a number of factors, including bad weather that plagues much of the country this week, it was unclear what, if any, long-range impact the rule changes and their aftermath would have on Fed policy, which calls for a moderate monetary ex-

However, initially at least, the money managers ended up with a much easier money market than they had bargained for, so they were compelled to take decisive counter measures. On Wednesday, for example, the Fed sold almost $2 billion of Treasury bills under matched sale-purchase agreements (so-called "reverse repos"), which have the effect of pulling funds out of the market temporarily.

The St. Louis bank said that business loans at all large banks averaged almost $90 billion in the four weeks ended Nov. 8, which represented a 15.2 percent seasoncrease over the three months ended that date. By contrast, in the last year business loans have risen only at a 52 percent annual rate.

The Fed's rule changes, which went into effect this week, had two aspects: First, the reserves that banks are required to hold against their deposits were re-duced and distinctions in required reserves between banks based on

GM Official Said to See Wankel In Most of Firm's Cars by 1982

DETROIT, Nov. 17 (Reuters),-One of General Motors Corp.'s proposed product programs shows the Wankel rotary engine in 80 to 100 percent of GM's autos within the next 10

The disclosure was made in a speech made to a GM management conference by John Delorean, vice-president of the car and truck division The proceedings of the conference are private but Reuters obtained some of the details, including several comments attributed to Mr. Delorean. General Motors made no immediate Mr. Delorean said the first use of the Wankel would be in n "spectacular" two-plus-two version of the Chevrolet Vega in the fall of 1974. He added that over the long range GM will be able to build Wankels cheaper than conventional engines. He said the company is planning two versions of the Wankel -a single rotor that could be up to $70 cheaper than the present Vega four-cylinder engine and a double rotor which could be up to $60 cheaper than the standard V-8. He was quoted as also saying the Wankel promises to "revolutionize" the auto industry.

BLACK MOUNTAIN An Exploration in Community By Martin Duberman. Illustrated. Dutton, 527 pp. $12

which he published three years ago, Martin Duberman described. among many other things, the process of his disillusionment with conventional historical writing, and the growth of both his despair over history's ability to illuminate the past and his doubts about its relevance to the future. It was a remarkable performance coming from a professional historian (then a professor at Princeton, now Distinguished Service Professor of History at Lehman College)—not least of all because Duberman managed to convey so much about himself while dealing with subjects outside himself. In other words, the book was deeply personal without being self-indulgent. But it left one worrying about where Duberman could possibly go next in his writing, especially if one happened to know, as I did, that he was even then working on another excursion into the past, a history of an experimental college he did not attend. And now, judging from the finished product, it turns out that such misgivings were not without foundation.
For "Black Mountain: An Exploration in Community" is a deeply divided book—on the one hand a commitment to the past and an attempt to write conventional history; on the other hand a denial of the "pastness" of the past and an attempt to merge it with the present. And despite all of Duberman's labors to heal the division—by alternately making the present past and the past present—the division is a harmful one. "Black Mountain" is really two booksone reasonably satisfying, the other faintly embarrassing.

The satisfying one is the story proper of Black Mountain, an experimental educational community which was started in North Carolina in 1933 by a group of renegade teachers from Rollins College, and which managed to stagger through crisis after exhilarating crisis until it finally collapsed in 1956. It was not just any experimental school; it had a mystique about it that made those of us attending "squarer" colleges in the 1940s and 1950s think of it as the only alternative, even if we never dared make the plunge.

Fortunately for the way he has approached his history, Duberman remains a skilled interviewer, re-searcher and writer. So we get a lucid and often entertaining view of the incredible muddles into which the Black Mountain community kept working itself in its attempt to define itself and to sustain the delicate mechanism. whatever it may have been, that made for a free and creative environment (ill-chosen words, no doubt, since part of what made the community exciting was the unending dialectical strife over whether it was in fact "free" and "creative." or even ought to be). And Duberman succeeds admirably in conveying the distinctive flavor of each of the community's

IN a collection of essays called major periods—the early year. "The Uncompleted Past," under the founder, John And Rice; the middle years w European refugees like Bauhaus alumnus Josef Ali held sway, and spirits like Bentley, Buckminster Pu Merce Cumningham and Cage fermented; and the years (Duberman's favor though I found the sense of trition and impending doom conveys depressing), when poet Charles Olson and Black Mountain School" of ing rose to prominence.

A vivid group portrait, t and a moving picture in e sense of the phrase. But oh, agonizing over the job of p ing it that Duberman indulge throughout the second, fa embarrassing book that uni alongside the first. Oh, the c plaining about "the data . . . ing over" and the author's jective feelings getting lost, the persistence of Duberman's tempts to attend Black Mour retrospectively. Oh, the someness of the lectures on tory's elusiveness! And perhaps most annoyin all, the ultimate failure of Du man to convey precisely reasons for his enchaptment. though he keeps toying with to project himself into a pier history he never experienced rectly, though he keeps labo his private reasons for feelin involved, he never does suc in becoming part of his s And when he writes at the end, "I completed the book a minutes ago. I'm strangely, it ically, near tears," we do share his tears, we really can understand them, and the el is maudlin.

It is clear enough what Du man was trying to do. He wa to take his dissatisfaction conventional history a step for and demonstrate how one car construct the past without guising the personal blases inevitably shape a histor views-to show how the sub tivity of the observer twists objectivity of the observed. suspect he might have c closer to success had he gone further and written a book which the most important s was that of Martin Duber writing a history of Black M tain. But instead of doing s has tried to have it both traditional and innovative. unfortunate result is that traditional story takes over. the innovative one merely trudes.

3 of the 4 Major Bowls Are Set, Barring Upsets

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYT).- home, Notre Dame and Texas Bowl officials have confirmed that if all goes well tomorrow, match-ups for three of the four major post-season bowl games will be Penn State-Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl, Alabama-Texas in the Cotton Bowl and Nebrasks-Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl. Quantico Disbanding Team Dating to 1919

Football Dropped? Tell It to the Marines

By George Minot Jr.

QUANTICO, Va., Nov. 17 (WP).-Tomorrow the halls of Montezuma should be hung in crepe and the shores of Tripoli should be closed to bathers. The Marine Corps will be bosting its last football game. Quantico having been ordered to disband the team which dates back to 1919.

Head coach Ron Eckert expects his players to be "fired up with emotion" for the encounter against South Dakota State. (The final game will be on the road, against Xavier in Cincinnati on Nov. 23—Thanksgiving Day.)

"I can't say what will happen," added Eckert, "but I wouldn't want to be in their [South Dakota's] place."

The decision was made by the Marine commandant, Gen Robert E. Cushman jr., and it had doomed a program which has produced 325 victories and nine unbeaten seasons. The com-mandant determined that "continued personnel and financial support for football could not be justified" because of "rising costs" and "come-peting recreational programs for funds."

'An Order Is an Order

No display of unhappiness is expected from the well-disciplined Marines at the game tomorrow. "The public relations advantage of the team is obvious," coach Eckert said, choosing his words carefully. "But I'm sure the commandant considered this before deciding to disband the club.

"An order is an order." Boasting such players as Eddie Lebaron, Jim Mutscheller, Ken McAfee, Art Donovan and Bob after World War II. Perhaps their best athlete was one of their first, Frank Goettge. "He is easily the greatest football player of the present day," wrote Walter Camp in 1922. "He is, indeed, the nearest approach to Jim Thorpe of all time."

Schnelker, the Marines won eight service titles

Goettge, a back, captained the Quantico teams from 1921 through 1924 which won 38 games and lost only two.

Coach Eckert, a major and career Marine, was a Little All-America guard at Upsala in 1962 and the next year played for the 10-1 Quantico team which whipped the San Diego Marines for the allservice championship.

Quantico's program was on the upgrade, said Eckert, who was looking forward to playing Syracuze in the opener next fall. Delaware was scheduled for the next three years. The Marines have a 7-3 won-lost record this season.

If congressional pressure or some other miracle should save the team. "we would be out in the cold as far as a schedule goes," said the coach. "Syracuse has already filled with Bowling Green, Delaware with Toledo and the others are scrambling."

Pro Football Odds and Outlook

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (NYT). The outlook and betting choices in National Football League games this weekend, with wonlost-tied records in parentheses:

> Sunday American Conference

N.Y. JETS (6-3-0) at MIAMI (9-0-0)—The Dolphins' Mercury Morris is averaging 5.8 yards a carry, Larry Csonka 5.4 and the team's rushing attack 206 a game, which is near the league record. Against that the Jets will present a beat-up defense, especially at linebacker. Betting choice: Mlami by 7 points.

OAKLAND (5-3-1) at DENVER (3-6-0)-The Raiders gave up 361 yards passing but only 13 rushing in losing to the Broncos, 30-23, a month ago. The Denver defense is badly hurt now. Jim Turner has had three field goals in each of the Broncos' three victories. Betting choice: Oakland by 6 1/2. PITTSBURGH (7-2-0) at CLEVELAND (6-3-0)—The Steelers have not won in Cleveland since 1964. They will be hurt by injuries on defense to Andy Russell and L.C. Greenwood. Terry Bradshaw, the publicized quarterback may be the weakest link on this coming team. Mike Phipps' lastminute touchdown pass on Monday night to Frank Pitts did a lot for the maligned Browns. Betting choice: Pittsburgh by 7.

has completed 55 percent of his 105 passes for 711 yards, three touchdowns, no interceptions. What's wrong with that? They are 1-2 in the AFC passing statistics. Although their offensive line is battered, the Bengals can still win a playoff berth because of an easy schedule. Betting choice: Cincinnati by 4 1/2.

SAN DIEGO (2-6-1) at KANSAS CITY (5-4-0)-Mo Moorman and Jack Rudnay, the guard and center missed so badly in Pittsburgh, come back for the Chiefs but Ed Podolak is hurt again. Mike Garrett and Cld Edwards did a ers last Monday night. Betting choice: Kansas City by 7 1,2.

BUFFALO (2-7-0) at NEW ENGLAND (2-7-0)—The Bills beat the Patriots, 38-14, to start the Pats' six-game losing streak. They have suspended Carl Garrett for the season and there goes their winning game. Betting choice: Buffalo by 3 1/3.

beat the Packers, 20-3, in a preseason game, which is hard to believe now. The Packers' John Brockington is going to run right out of the Astrodome. Betting choice: Green Bay by 9.

National Conference

MINNESOTA (5-4-0) at LOS ANGELES (5-3-1).—The Vikings run to the right 90 percent of the time to exploit Ron Yary's blocking. The all-pro tackle goes against Jack Youngblood, the Ram end. "You have to be a little desperate to fight well and we're desperate," says Tom Prothro, the Ram ccach. Betting choice: Minnesota by 3 1/2.

SAN FRANCISCO (4-4-1) at CHICAGO (3-5-1).-Frank Nunley, the 49ers' best linebacker, is injured, which won't help. But everybody has figured out how to defense the Bears' Bobby Douglass. Betting choice: San Francisco by 4.

NEW ORLEANS (1-7-1) at DETROIT (5-4-0).-Joe Schmidt, the coach, and many Lions remember the last time these teams played, in 1970. Tom Dempsey's 63-yard field goal won for the Saints, 19-17, as time ran out. Archie Manning is New Orleans's leading runner. No wonder. He has been dropped 27 times while trying to pass. Betting choice:

Lions by 16 1/2. N.Y. GIANTS (5-4) at ST. LOUIS (2-6-1).—The Giants seem to regard their season as over and are content with it. The agonizing Cardinals have four more home games before derisive, apathetic, non-capacity crowds. Betting choice: Giants by 4 1/2.

DALLAS (7-2-0) at PHILA-DELPHIA (2-6-1).-The Cowboy defensive line has been scrambled, partly due to injuries and that's why the team has given up 100 points in the last four games. The offense fortunately has scored 115. The Eagles have lost nine straight to Dallas and only one was close. Betting choice: Dallas

by 14. Monday Night

ATLANTA (5-4-0) at WASH-

INGTON (8-1-0).—The Falcons do poorly at protecting their quarterback, Bob Berry, and the Redskins' rush could wipe them out. Bill Kilmer leads the N.F.C. in the passing statistics. Betting choice: Washington by 7.

One source in the White House told exactly what kind of week it's been: Pat Nixon came into the Pres-

"What is it, Pat?" the President asked.

"It's a resignation form to fill out. Are you asking me to re-

"It's just a formality." President Nixon said. "Tve asked everyone in the White House to resign so I can get rid of the people I don't want."

"But that's unfair," Pat pro-"I worked very hard for you during the campaign."

"Of course you did, Pat, and I told Haldeman and Ehrlichman to take that into consideration. I said, When we go over the list of the people we're dropping, keep in mind that Pat was at my side during the three times I left the White House to campaign."

Mrs. Nixon held the resignation form in her hand and said tearfully, "You would think after all these years there would be no question about my staying with you for your second term." "Now don't get upset, Pat," the President said. "I owe you a lot, but I have to do what's best for America. I can't give special favors to any group nor can I as President favor one person in the White House

"It does, Pat. We've not only got all those facts, but we have your FBI record as well. On the basis of all this I would guess you have a better than 50-50 chance of staying in the White House. But it isn't my decision alone. The purge staff has to look at the big picture. How much money is it costing Is the person doing more than his share of the work he is assigned? Was he involved in the Watergate bugging affair? And finally, is the job worth not eliminating altogether?

"I went with you to China, I went with you to Russia, I went with you to Iran. Surely that must mean a lot to you."

"It does Pat. The boys were very impressed with those trips and it's a big plus. At the same time, the next four years are going to be the most important in the history of the United States. MARY BLUME

When a Jewish Artist Leaves The Soviet Union

NOGENT-SUR-MARNE, France (IET).—Alexander Ziotnik lives in a French government-run artists' colony outside Paris with seven months worth of his work, a six-month-old mastery of the English language, and a good deal of hope. He left his native Russia in June, 1971, and after a few months in Jeruszlem came to Europe.

His work is even beginning to sell. He doesn't like to sell. "In Russia we sold only our bad work, not our good," he says. "Here we must sell the good, not the bad."

Mr. Zlotnik is tall, bearded and good-natured. Only 32. he was a well-known sculptor in the Soviet Union, a member of the artists' union from the age of 24. He was even sent on a cultural exchange visit to Japan. "We were 15 persons who were artists and 15 persons not artists," he recalls. His one brush with authority, when he was exhibiting at the Manezh gallery show at which Khrushchev made his famous denunclation of modern art, came about for the zamiest of reasons.

"My studio at the time was in a basement." A caretaker, taking Khrushchev's comments on underground art all too literally, denounced Zlotník for working underground.

In general he led a prvileged life, with a studio in Moscow and two automobiles. Although Alexander Zlotnik is Jewish, he had no personal experience with anti-Semitism. "I am not thinking about that there," he says. "Russian life is on different levels. Some people are here." His hand defines a certain low level, then moves up. "Some people are up here. I was famous enough in Russia. I had everything. Nobody could say bad things to me." So when Zlotnik decided to take advantage of the more lenient Soviet policy towards emigration of Jews, his reasons vere more artistic than religious: he was sick of doing one kind of art for official approval and another kind for himself. With his parents, his doctor sister and brother-in-law he went to Israel, His Gentile wife, Galina, stayed behind, believing she would soon be able to join her husband. Galina, 23, has however not been allowed to leave the Soviet Union and no official reason has been offered. Russia is illogical, all life in Russia is without logic," her husband savs.

Leaving Israel for Europe, Zlotnik succeeded in drumming up sympathy for his wife's plight. A petition signed by such figures as W.H. Auden, Henry Moore, Artur Rubinstein and Jean-Paul Sartre, as well as by Umberto Terracini, an Italian senator and a member of the Communist party, has been sent to Russia pointing out that Zlotnik is a distinguish-ed artist whose work is suffering: "He is unable to find a creative frame of mind whilst he is extremely worried about the fate of his wife." No reply has been made.

Creative Zeal

Despite the worries of the petition signers, Zlotnik is in fact full of creative zeal, his studio is filled with ink drawings and plaster models of sculptures to be cast in bronze. happy, when I am making my art and sometimes I think it is all I want," he says. "Sometimes."

His style has changed from the rather rigid sub-Henry Moore work he did in Russia to something freer and more "I have a lot of inspiration and a new life," he "In Russia I am thinking about a lot of not necessarily art things. Now I am thinking about art and I can be free." Always secretly fascinated by surrealism, he now describes his work as physiological surrealism. "For me, like all art surrealism is the transformation of life without lying. I call my art physiological surrealism because now I am old enough to have no illusions, I don't want to make lies in my art, I don't want to depart from physiological functions."

If public Soviet art is of necessity without interest, Zlotnik says that the work that artists are privately working on in their studios is more interesting than what one sees in Paris ateliers. 'In Russia we think of artists in France like God, They aren't God."

When Zlotnik got to Israel he was promptly able to sell two works, with which he bought a ticket to Europe. He travelled through Europe by making drawings in hotel rooms and selling them. The French government has been notably welcoming: the Ministry of Cultural Affairs has signed a letter attesting to his cultural value, his bright and roomy atelier in the Maison Nationale des Artistes in Nogent-sur-Marne rents for only $100 a month, and even the Paris police have passed compliments on the sketches he has made while successfully waiting for his visa.

He plans a show in Paris this spring, has had pieces bought for the French government collections, is in a promi-nent American surrealist collection and is in communication with the Guggenheim Museum in New York.

Alexander Zlotnik likes to think he is without illusions. This isn't yet true, but he is working at it. While cleaning up his studio for visitors he had just spilled a bottle of ink over at least a dozen finished drawings.

"That's life," he said with a shrug. "I lost much in Russia, all my work. But I am an optimist. I think these pictures I just ruined must be very bad-now."

There's an empty room in the cadet barracks of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, and the reported sighting of a ghost is responsible. The two plebes who occupied the room, in the 4th Regiment area, told academy officers and fellow cadets of several times seeing an emanation of a cavalryman holding a musket and adorned with a handlebar moustache. The sightings were reported last month, and two cadet officers verified that they, too, saw "some sort of phenomena" in the room. "We moved the plebes out of the room and left it empty," an academy spokesman said, "because there was too much traffic. Their fellow cadets were bringing in cameras and tape recorders, and the occupants weren't getting any studying done." CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

A NEW TWIST, FOLKS: Our "Dear Polks" and which ran for so many years was extremely successful or we would just not have continued it for such a long time. Many, many folks journeyed to Madrid especially to look at and to buy MARLAU furniture. Many, many others, believe it or not, bought by mail. Now we'd like to REVERSE the process. We'd like to REVERSE the process. We'd like to REVERSE the process. We'd like to read up a truck or two with a few rooms of furniture, hire a hall in your home town and show you our handiwork firsthand, providing you and enough others ask us to come. There are no catches, no obligations - just enough evidence of interest on your part by way of a note or, hetter said, notes telling us of the kind of things you're interested in sening and we'll be there with bells on. Too, we could conceivably buy you a drink.
